ENTHUSIASM INCREASES IN GAZETTE VOTING CONTEST

Whole County is Interested in Great Event—Scores of Nominations Received.

FINE LIST OF CANDIDATES TO BE ANNOUNCED IN NEXT MONDAY'S ISSUE.

Send in Your Nomination at Once—Ballot Box to be Found at Gazette Office.

"Count that day lost, whose sun when on the fade, Views from thy hands no nomination made."
—Lyrics of Contest Editor.

The enthusiasm in The Gazette's great contest is increasing hourly. Yesterday's mail brought in a large number of nominations, both from the country and city, and next Monday's issue will contain the names of as fine a list of candidates as can be desired.

The ballot box is now in place and the voting has commenced in earnest, and when the list will be given out, with the number of votes accorded each, the contest will have a strong and interesting foundation.

If you have not already entered your name in the contest, do so at once, systematize your campaign, and get in the lead by having an early start.

All points concerning the contest will be explained either by phone or letter. If in doubt, send in your nomination, and the contest manager will get into communication with you, explaining everything in detail.

Open Evenings.
For the benefit of those who cannot call during business hours, this office and contest department will be open every evening.

You Can Win.
Any young lady is eligible to compete in this great contest and popular vote, as explained in this issue, will determine those who are successful.

This contest affords an excellent opportunity for the young ladies of Janesville and vicinity, to win either a piano, a handsome piece of jewelry or a business education at the expense of The Gazette.

The ambitious girl who is quick to realize the advantage of this exceptional opportunity should see that her name is sent to the contest manager, and follow the instructions that appear daily. And, remember, to win, you must receive the largest number of votes, according to the conditions of the contest.

After your nomination, call on and interest all your friends and by systematized and energetic action induce as many as possible, not only to cast their votes for you, but to interest their respective friends in your behalf.

The easiest and surest way to win is for candidates to ask their friends not only to vote for the nomination, but to settle arrangements or to place their subscriptions.

Your friends will be glad to accommodate you, as this costs the subscriber nothing extra.

The settlement of these subscriptions entitles you to a special ballot which can be voted any time during the contest.

Any person who desires to vote, in this contest, may do so by properly filling out and voting the coupons that appear in each issue of The Gazette, but these coupons are good for only ten days from date of publication and will not be counted after the date printed on them.

The special vote, ballots, which are issued for every subscription payment, may be cast any time during the contest, and they will count their full value for the candidate whose name they bear.

People living in one district may vote for a candidate that lives in another; they are not confined to their own particular district.

At the close of the contest the successful ones will receive orders from The Gazette for their respective prizes, and they may use or dispose of them in accordance to their individual liking. They are transferable.

Instructions for Voting.
Send to the Contest Manager the name of the young lady whom you desire to nominate and secure one of these valuable prizes. The name of the party making the nomination will not be divulged if so desired.

With a little bit of these elegant Kodak cameras, a beautiful watch, ring, a scholarship or a gold watch, see that her name is entered, then pledge her your hearty support.

Like the "early bird," much depends upon an early start; consequently names should be entered at once. Don't delay.

No candidate is barred because she is not at present or never has been a Gazette subscriber. This grave offense is forgiven this time.

Doublets would be candidates, enter on the start; present your name at once and your host of friends will do the rest.

September 4.
The surprise of September 4 will be the fact that you won with such little amount of effort put forth on your part.

The issue of The Gazette Monday, July 19, will contain the names of ladies competing, with their respective number of votes.

From then on, votes will be counted at 9 a. m. each day and the results of the count printed the following afternoon.

In behalf of those interested a short article will appear each day which will enable them to keep in close touch with the contest and those competing.

The articles will be brief and will not interfere with or crowd out the regular amount of high-class news, for which The Gazette is noted.

Each contestant is to receive this paper, free of charge, beginning from the date their name is presented to the Contest Manager and continuing up to the closing night of the contest.

Twelve young ladies of Janesville and vicinity are going to be made happy, and it is up to you, readers of Janesville and vicinity, to decide whom they are to be.

Kindly look for the page announcement in this issue.

Division of Territory.
The division of territory will be made as follows:

District No. 1 includes all territory inside of the city limits of Janesville.

District No. 2 includes all territory outside of the city limits of Janesville and west of Rock River.

District No. 3 includes all territory outside of the city limits of Janesville and east of the Rock River.

As the names of the contestants are to be published July 19, nominations should be entered previous to that date.

Nominations will be accepted after this date, but a great advantage is gained by having your name among those of the first announcement, as your friends may pledge their assistance to another candidate, not knowing of your intentions.

The Securing of Ballots.
The selling of ballots will not be permitted.

Everyone is eligible to vote; all old subscribers, either paying ball subscriptions or paying in advance, also new subscribers who pay in advance, are given a special ballot which is good any time during the contest.

The scale of votes which will appear in the page announcement of this issue, will determine the number of votes the subscriber is entitled to.

The coupons printed are good for their given amount.

The full amount of money must be brought to the office of The Gazette sent direct by mail to Contest Manager or paid local agents.

CUNNING SHACKLED JUMPED INTO RIVER

Handcuffs Were Removed from Wrists When He Rose to Surface—Large Crowd Witnessed Feat.

Before an immense concourse of people gathered at the Court street bridge and vicinity, this noon, Cunningham, the jail-breaker, again demonstrated his ability to escape from handcuffs under the most difficult conditions. After both wrists and feet, which had been fettered by Officer Patrick Fanning, the runaway waded to the deep end of the bridge. For many seconds following the splash, he was invisible, and then he came to the surface, swimming with powerful arm strokes, and at intervals holding aloft the fetters which had bound his hands.

After catching hold of a row-boat that was in waiting, he reached down under water and deftly removed the handcuffs from his feet. The performance was greeted with cheers as he completed the feat.

Raise Price.
The barbers of the city held a meeting for the purpose of agreeing upon a price of 15 cents for shaves in place of 10 cents which has always been the price here.

RARE PRESENCE OF MIND SAVED DIKE RIDER'S LIFE

Harry Nowlan Made His Automobile "Slidestep" on Slippery Pavement When Man Fell in Front of It.

As Harry Nowlan was guiding his touring car at a rapid clip eastward on Milwaukee street about nine o'clock last evening, a bicycle rider tried to cross his path about ten feet in front of the automobile. The bicyclist ran around of the street car tracks and sent the rider sprawling right in front of the gasoline vehicle. To the horrified onlookers it seemed a proposition of sure death and the ladies in the car, Mrs. Walter Taylor and Mrs. Mark McNamara, as well as several pedestrians, screamed in anticipation of what appeared to be an inevitable tragedy. Certain it was that the car could not be turned short enough or its motion arrested quick enough to save the man. But thanks to the sprinkling wagon which had passed that way but a short time before, Mr. Nowlan, with perfect presence of mind, was able to maneuver and manipulate the machine so that it skidded sideways clear to the curb. The badly frightened young man, after his almost miraculous escape, picked himself up, mounted the bike, and rode away with all possible haste.

KING WON LANE CUP FROM AL. SCHALLER

Defeated His Opponent Two Up And One to Play in Finals Yesterday Afternoon.

By defeating Albert Schaller, two up and one to play in the finals for the Wilson Lane cup, George E. King is the holder of the trophy for the coming year. On Monday, King defeated Francis Grant, and Schaller won from George Hamann in the semifinals. Owing to the interest in this match, the "break" tourney scheduled for yesterday afternoon was not held. Other contests in the near future are for the Valentine medal and the Richardson medal. On Friday the first of the second series of bridge games will be held. The games start at three o'clock and added interest is given to the contests by the announcement that there will be a prize for gentlemen as well as ladies, and the male members of the club are urged to take part in the contests. The house committee have plans in contemplation for an outdoor entertainment to which the public will be invited, either in the shape of a "Pay Streak" exhibit, such as

"Oh, no, it won't," answered the girl in white.
"But they've been out in a boat together fishing all the afternoon."
"I know it."
"Well, don't you suppose he seized the opportunity to propose?"
"I know he didn't."
"How do you know?"
"He actually brought back some fish."

The Better Way.

"Do you know," said Green as he overhauled Davison on the street the other evening, "that the wheat crop is going to be short this year?"
"Yes, and it's going to make hard times," was the reply.
"You bet it is. And they say the hay crop is short."
"Yes."
"And the potato-bugs are eating up the vines."
"Yes."
"And that Panama Canal is going to cost fifty million dollars more than they thought for."
"I see."
"I tell you, Davison, this country is on the verge. Yes, sir, right on the verge."
"Yes, I think so myself."
"There will probably be another earthquake soon."
"Shouldn't a bit wonder."
"Followed by a terrible war with Japan."
"Yes."
"And bankrupts will be as thick as flies around a sugar barrel, and we shall all go to the dogs."
"I can't dispute it."
"Yes, sir, go right to the dogs; but, say, Davison."
"Yes."

Madam, We Can Save You Money...

In this city there are many women who still bake their own bread. With flour at $7.00 per barrel we can save you about 2c per loaf or 60c per month, on a basis of one loaf per day, because our large business of over 7,000 loaves per day allows us to buy carloads of flour direct from the mill—then if these women will serve YANKEE BREAD we will save them a lump sum of money each month.

We bake every day in our large factory over 7,000 loaves of bread—more than one-fourth the bread sold in Janesville.

So we consume a large output of flour each month. In this way we buy flour at lower prices than you would believe possible.

Then let us give you the advantage of this saving—for we furnish all the materials and do all the work for less than it costs you to buy the flour alone. And even then your bread is never half so good, because you lack the wonderful facilities of our expensive factory.

Baked in Steam Ovens

The secret of delicious bread lies in the oven.

Your oven bakes in dry heat—ours in live steam.

These great ovens are made with low roofs to retain all moisture rising from the bread.

Then other steam is forced in under terrific pressure, superheated to 340 degrees.

In this fierce heat the starch granules swell until they burst into a myriad of particles so the yeast cells quickly convert them into sugar.

The result is the most perfect loaf ever baked—it is so moist and dainty and with such a delicious flavor that it is nothing less than a revelation in bread baking.

Why Steam is Necessary

Yeast continues to ferment until the bread is baked in a heat of 212 degrees.

Your kitchen stove has a maximum temperature of 200 degrees, while the center of the loaf rarely exceeds 100 degrees.

And it is dry heat.

Such heat crisps the crust and then cannot penetrate to the center of the loaf. The crust keeps out the heat but retains the moisture.

Thus while your loaf is damp, the center is only half baked.

The yeast cells continue to ferment in the stomach and cause indigestion.

But our steam keeps the crust moist until the inside is fully baked. Then we turn off the steam and let the bread slowly come to a rich brown crust.

That's why Yankee Bread is so delightful—every yeast cell is killed and it has a delicious flavor that is simply enticing.

What Makes Bread Rise

Our dough is kneaded by machinery, but there was a time when it was kneaded by the hands.

Then it was better to bake at home.

Bread will not rise well unless every grain of flour is surrounded by water. So we knead the dough for an hour.

Your arms become tired and you stop in fifteen minutes. Your dough expands about sixteen times while ours expands more than twenty-one times.

So here again our facilities excel those of your kitchen.

Please Consider This Point

We have never put one grain of alum in our bread. When the baker was confined to one kind of flour some used alum to whiten the bread if the flour was poor—we never did.

For we used a different method—we blended the flour.

One kind of flour we buy is made from wheat rich in gluten, another famous for its starch and still a third from a wheat grown in a region where moisture is plentiful.

Thus we obtain a uniform quality in every loaf and absolute purity in every grain. For we regard purity and cleanliness above all other things essential to good bread making.

Better Food Than Meat

One pound of Yankee Bread contains 70 parts of nitrogen as compared with 29 parts in a pound of potatoes and only 18 parts in one pound of meat.

Thus 5 cents' worth of bread has more nourishment than 80c worth of meat.

Consider also that bread is only one-third water while meat is half water and potatoes fully two-thirds—so in other foods you often pay for mostly water.

Those who work hard and require the most food will find no better nourishment than a delicious loaf of Yankee Bread.

Fresh from the Ovens

Yankee Bread is delivered to the grocers while it is yet warm.

Our drivers take it fresh from the ovens and in ten minutes it is at the first store. In a few hours it is in every store.

These delightful loaves—aren't they better than the three-day old bread in your pantry when you also bake twice a week?

How do your loaves compare with ours brought to you fresh from the ovens?

Serve one loaf of Yankee Bread on your table. Then let your folks decide who shall bake the bread in the future.

If they decide in our favor you should be delighted. For surely you do not want to spend one-sixth of your week in the kitchen when Yankee Bread costs you less than your flour alone.

It is delicious in flavor (baked in steam)—it is healthful (better than meat)—it is clean (not adulterated)—it is cheap (costs less than flour)—then why not serve it on your table? Learn how good, how nutritious, how light and dainty and of what delicious flavor bread can be when baked by our method.

Much larger and three times as good as any other bread

CROPS AND DIVIDENDS

Pleasant crops now rapidly maturing represent a value of approximately three billion dollars. As soon as they are threshed they will begin to enter freely into those primary commercial movements which start with mid-summer in the United States and maintain their activity until well after the turn of the year. Shipments of these staple commodities from farms to primary markets entail a burden upon the financial institutions and currency system of the country, unlike anything else in proportion in probably any other country in the world.

At the other end of the line in the great financial centers the preparation for the payment of dividends and interest on securities will mean while have been thrice provided for. The July dividend and interest accumulations this year were figured at $218,000,000. Last October the estimated accumulations necessary to meet these charges were $125,000,000, and the January dividends of the current year aggregated $210,000,000.

Dividend disbursements and crop purchases are alike in one respect. They represent the claims of industry and ownership upon capital. The crop yields, bringing their accumulative values into the autumn of the year, represent so much of an annual claim against the commercial world. These claims have to be or have been met by the transmission of cash or credit to points of origin. This is the centrifugal tendency which the crops inaugurate and maintain as long as the owners continue to sell.

The return current takes the form of purchases on the part of the crop owners or producers, and manifests itself in the movement to primary markets. With all such purchases the obligations of the mercantile distributor to the manufacturer and jobber are discharged, so that two different movements, commodities in the one direction and cash or credit transactions in the other, take place almost simultaneously, each in turn discharging the obligation created by the other.

Much the same process is worked out by means of dividends. The investor has put his capital into securities. The lending of that capital to enterprise creates the obligation of interest and dividends. It is the price which employment of capital pays for what is already accumulated. The only difference is that dividends and interest represent annual or semi-annual or even quarterly deductions from net earnings. But those net earnings in turn become the fund of free expenditure with which the recipients set in motion effective demand for commodities.

Part of this demand is for food supplies, part for shelter, for clothing and for the cultural or diverting objects of living. But there is invariably some deduction from capital through depreciation or loss which has to be replaced by savings. Therefore, part of the dividend and interest or income must always be dedicated to the maintenance and the increase of capital. Where this is not done profitable enterprise must in due time perish through loss of efficiency, just as the crops will show a diminished productivity where the fertility of the soil is not sustained by the expenditure of part of the income in the maintenance of capital power.

A CHANGE FOR THE WORSE

"Some four years ago, in that period of abundant prosperity which followed the temporary recession of business of 1903-1904, a number of industrial corporations adopted the practice of issuing quarterly statements of earnings. It was a very good practice, and the United States Steel Corporation had followed that system of keeping in touch with the public since its inception," says the Wall Street Journal.

"There can surely be no good reason for abandoning so laudable a custom. Nevertheless, the Steel corporation still continues to publish its statements every three months; but, alas, the other industrial companies with few exceptions no longer do so. This is greatly to be regretted, and is perhaps the most serious retrograde movement recorded since the virtue of publicity as a sound business proposition began to be appreciated.

"There are doubtless abundant excuses for not publishing such earnings. They involve considerable trouble in collection and tabulation, possibly also they are a source of extra expense in clerical work. It is not always easy to make such figures absolutely accurate, and certainly in some industries it would be very difficult to make a return which would be worth much within any reasonable time of the preceding quarter day. It will be seen then that there are plenty of excuses, but what is wanted is not an excuse but a reason.

"The reason is not altogether unassociated with a well defined attempt to restore conditions which had gone greatly out of favor during the Roosevelt administration. There is a very obvious experiment to see how much in the way of return to old methods of improper secrecy and unfair inside privilege the public and the administration will stand. The movement is quite clearly marked and is showing itself in other ways besides the one indicated in these remarks. The old and vicious practice of regarding a position on a board of directors not as a trusteeship with serious responsibility for other people's money, but as an opportunity for private aggrandizement, has been revived. It is deeply to be regretted because such backsliding always involves especially heavy effort before the ground lost is recovered.

"In order that there shall be no implication of an attack upon particular stocks, it is not proposed to give at present the names of the corporations referred to. Any student of financial affairs should know them well enough and if a real indication of an effort to do better is shown it may not be necessary to publish such a list at all."

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor states in his usual authoritative manner that the business depression and the dullness prevailing in labor circles have disappeared. In fact, he has almost reached that halcyon stage of optimism where he can predict any number of strikes, boycotts, riots, and other evidences of prosperity.

As usual the American public is roused to frantic protest against the abuse of the Fourth of July, and the number of deaths needlessly caused; but the remedy lies in the American people themselves. Active preventive measures on the third day of the month are worth more than anything that can be done on the fifth.

Little less wonderful than the genius of the Wright brothers in conquering the air was the capacity of the blind Senator Gore of Oklahoma to follow with his mind's eye and keen sense of hearing the movement of the aeroplane as it swept the upper atmosphere at Fort Myer.

The refusal of German's colonial secretary to enter into a selling agreement with the De Beers syndicate relative to diamonds evidently has a basis of common sense, when it is considered that the newly discovered fields in German Southwest Africa are valued at $250,000,000.

John D. Rockefeller's endorsement of the Sunday school as the best investment he ever made should stimulate attendance.

Even the man telling fish stories should try and resemble the truth somewhat in giving the facts to the public.

It would not be considered a deadly insult just now to ask a citizen to jump in the river.

The question now asked is: Can a good tariff bill come out of that conference committee?

Mr. Roosevelt may have started hunting baboons as a lesson to nature fakers.

Jeffries says he will not fight John. He must be tired of vanity.

Uncle Walt of Emporia

By WALT MASON
(Copyright, 1909, by George Mathew Adams.)

The youthful bard, with flowing hair, whose life is free from pain and care, is always singing of despair, and dead men's bones; he likes to wall of Lost Lorraine, and stranded ships on rocky shores, and graves over which the March wind roams, and shrieks and moans. But when the bard is old and fat, and has no hair beneath his hat, he cuts out all such stuff as that—his song is gay; he finds that chunks of rhythmic gloom, that touch the graveyard and the tomb, the passing bell, and death and doom, don't often pay. For people in this world below are anxious to forget their woes; they'd think of love, and fame, and dough, and things like those when they're in need of extra grief they'll send away and buy a shirt; they'll surely never find relief in poet's throes. And so the bard who'd hit the spot must dish up glad, amusing rot, and leave the verse with sorrow fraught to laureates; and if with humble themes he toys, and makes an optimistic noise, and harps on jamborees and joys, to fame he stakes!

YOUR BOY'S PROPERTY.

If you give your boy a pig when it is small and it becomes father's hog when it grows big, a little lamb that grows into father's sheep, a small calf that grows into father's cow, why, you are confusing your boy's sense of property rights, and you may make a criminal of him.

Is the statement strong? Did you ever stop to consider the moral value involved in ownership and its effect on your boy?

Listen: Eighty per cent of all criminals are PROPERLY BORN people who have never been taught to do things skillfully!

Here, then, is a place to begin in making good citizens, because when you help the boy to own things and to make his own living he has respect for the property of others and is willing to let them make their own living.

Our very civilization rests on the basis of property rights. Break down these rights and you have anarchy.

It has been a long road by which humans have come to the knowledge of the difference between MINE and THINE.

Our stone age parents came to treasure a carved bone or a crude tool, a club or knife or hammer, or what not, and thus developed the sense of property.

You can see the beginnings of that in your baby boy.

Let another infant get into your son's high chair and note the primitive howl of the property owner! Let another child try to capture your baby's toys. There is social conflict at once.

Now, this sense of ownership and respect for property are strong in your boy, and if he grows up right they must be developed in him—not for his sake alone, but society's.

Let the child have some something of his own—his own chicken, his own spot in the garden, his own tree.

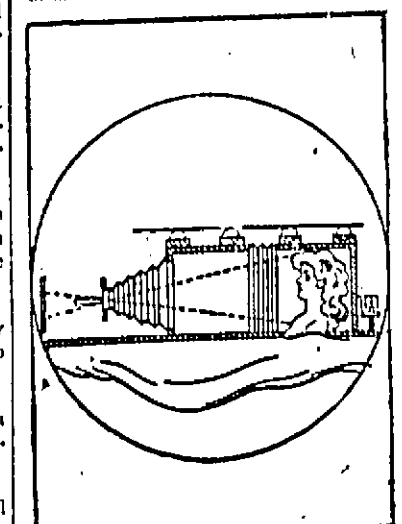

It will develop in him not only a pride and care of ownership, but will teach him to respect the property of other people. And the latter respect is vitally necessary in the moral development of the boy, because—

A mere desire for property may easily land a man in the penitentiary! Therefore the importance of making the boy—or girl, for that matter—the owner of something, however small. Ownership is a magic wand for opening the moral side of a man.

LIVING FACES ON SCREEN

Apparatus Reproduces Moving Image of Head Thrust Inside.

An interesting and sometimes startling invention is the apparatus designed by New York man, by means of which the face of a man can be projected on screens and all the movements of the subject's features can be reproduced as in moving pictures. The apparatus consists of a camera-like arrangement, much like a stereopticon. In the rear is a large screen on which will appear a person's head, while in front is a lens and inside is means for illuminating the interior of the chamber, the head is thrust down into the apparatus, and the image is projected to normal position on the screen. By this contrivance it is possible to have the image present all manner of facial contortions, as on moving picture screen, and the startling effect may be greatly enhanced by having the subject talk or sing, giving the appearance of sound issuing from the reflection on the screen. Other images besides those of the human face may also be reflected by this machine.

Curious Custom in Corfu. Recently a trader of Corfu, Theodoros Socolis, was murdered in his shop. The police, not having been able to lay the perpetrator of the deed by the heels, have invoked the aid of the church, following an old tradition. The cathedral chapter was summoned to curse publicly all those who might know the murderer and refuse to deliver him up to justice. The chapter proceeded to the victim's place of business, and there, in the presence of a large crowd, pronounced the curse. The bells of all the churches then tolled a knell.

BED FOR HOSPITALS

Can Be Adjusted to Give Patient Change of Position.

A boon to the bed-ridden and to thousands of hospital patients throughout the country is the invention of a Kentucky man. This is a bed which can be raised or lowered at the head to any position comfortable to the patient and having a rest for the legs in addition. A pair of standards with a crossbar, looking like a horizontal bar on rollers, holds the upper end of the bed suspended. At one side of the standards is a wheel and gear by which the head of the bed may be raised or lowered to change the position tion of the person occupying it. Running up from the foot of the bed is a T-shaped bar to be placed under the legs of the patient, so that when the bed is tilted at a steep angle he is kept from sliding downward, the bar beneath his legs giving him the feeling of being in a reclining chair. Any person who has been forced to lie flat for any length of time, unable to change his position, will appreciate the relief such a bed will afford.

FOLDING IRONING BOARD

Can Also Be Swung Around So That One End Is Clear of Support.

A folding ironing board that has other advantages besides its collapsibility has been devised by a Pennsylvania man. This board is not only a saver of space but it is especially adapted for the ironing of skirts or circular garments. It consists of two supports hinged upon the stand so that they fold in upon it. One of these supports is in one place and the other, at the broad end of the board, is double. On this latter section the board moves on a pivot so that the narrow end may be swung clear of the single support and rest on the double uprights. This leaves the end of the board free, and a skirt may be drawn over it without wrinkling or pressing other difficulties to smooth work. Iron rods hold the device firmly in position when it is in use, but when not in use it can be folded into a small compact and stowed away in a corner or a closet. It is also constructed so that the hinging means do not interfere with the work.

GET OUT OF WAY WHEN NOT IN USE.

One Way to Get Rain.

Last summer the Stephens suffered from drought. The peasants implored heaven for rain, but without effect. Saint Sebastian was brought, but he seemed indifferent to the temporal wants of the people. Some one on the present occasion has hit upon a novel idea, and when the statue of the saint was carried in procession they stuck in his mouth a bit of fish, the hardest and driest that they could find. It now remains to be seen whether this procedure will have the desired effect.

Inexhaustible Asphalt Supply.

In the island of Trinidad there is a lake 115 acres in extent, which, instead of containing water, contains asphalt in almost inexhaustible quantities, for nature fills it up as its contents are abstracted.

MUST ANSWER FOR "MALT MEAD" SOLD AT MILTON HOTEL

William Shemmel Haled Before Judge Field This Morning on Complaint of State Food Commissioner Larson.

William Shemmel, proprietor of the Milton hotel at Milton village, was haled before Judge Field in municipal court this morning to answer to charges made by Assistant State Dairy and Food Commissioner H. C. Larson of unlawfully selling and offering for sale an article of food within the meaning of Section 4600 of the Statutes of 1903 and the amendments thereof, namely a drink contained in a bottle bearing the following brand or label: "Absolutely Non-Intoxicating—Hager's Malt Mead—The Hager Malt & Brewing Co., Jefferson, Wis., U. S. A.—Fernet-Branca Liqueur."

It is averred in Mr. Larson's complaint that the said brand is false and misleading; that the drink contained in the said bottle was misbranded; that the contents were and are not non-intoxicating, but that on the contrary contained alcohol in a quantity sufficient to render the same intoxicating; and that the said drink was and is intoxicating against the peace and dignity of the state of Wisconsin. The specific date of the alleged offense is May 18, 1909.

$400 REDUCTION FOR MACHINE CO.

Valuation of Real Estate and Buildings Lowered Slightly at Final Meeting of Board of Review.

The board of review, at its final session this morning, ordered that the assessors' valuation of the real estate, including buildings, of the Rock River Machine Co. be reduced from $3,000 to $2,600. Owing to the lack of sufficient evidence to warrant any change, the personal property valuation was left at $5,000, as originally determined by the assessors. Others who had appeared before the board and asked to have their assessments reduced, failed to return with witnesses and that body adjourned sine die without making any additional changes.

THIRTEENTH CAMP OF Y. M. C. A. JUNIORS

Will Go to Lake Delavan on July 27 To Stay Until August Fifth.

July 27 to August 5, inclusive, are the dates set for the thirteenth annual encampment of the Y. M. C. A. Juniors and intermediates at Delavan Lake. For nine days, more than sixty healthy, pleasure-loving representatives of the summer sports that make the annual outing the one grand joy giving event of the year.

During the past thirteen years, this feature of the association's work has grown steadily in popularity. Under the careful supervision of association officers, the shores of one of the most beautiful of Wisconsin lakes, the members of the Junior classes have enjoyed outings that for safety and pure "close to nature" happiness can not be equaled.

Sixty Juniors took advantage of this opportunity last summer and it is expected that more than this number will be present at the thirteenth annual. Some slight changes will be inaugurated this year. Instead of banking in the auditorium on the Chautauque grounds, cottages have been secured for sleeping purposes. It has also been proposed that instead of taking the train to the lake that the members "hike" to their destination. As they have already made a number of "hikes" ranging from ten to fifteen miles, this will not work any special hardship.

The character of the association and the care exercised over the doings of the youthful campers is the best guarantee that can be given for an undertaking of this kind. That parents appreciate this, is shown by the increased number of those who allow their sons to attend. While on the grounds, strict camp rules which make for the safety without detracting from any legitimate pleasure of the boys, are in effect.

So far, not a single accident has marred the record. Regular hours, fresh air, good food and lodging, swimming, boating, long walks, "round table" talks, and a firm though kindly supervision go far toward making the annual camp the one big time of the year. Those who will have charge of the 1909 camp are: Physical Director P. E. H. Richards, Secretary J. C. Kline, and Dr. E. T. Richards.

MUCH EXERCISED BY TELEGRAPHIC STORY

Story That Whitehead, La Follette, Swenson and Burr Jones Ride in Same Carriage Creates Talk.

According to telegraphic reports, State Senator John M. Whitehead, who is in Washington on business connected with a dam across the Wisconsin river at Prairie du Sac, took a ride in an automobile with Senator La Follette, Magnus Swenson and Burr Jones, while in Washington.

The Milwaukee Free Press dispatch has the following to say: "That the day of miracles is not passed was brought to the attention of Wisconsin people in Washington today by a manifestation utterly unprecedented. A large red automobile was seen tearing down Pennsylvania avenue, evidently headed for Fort Meyer to see the Wright ship."

In fact, it was Senator John M. Whitehead, with Burr Jones of Madison occupying the front seat. La Follette and Magnus Swenson, if any body has seen La Follette and Whitehead in the same carriage in recent years the record of the fact has been lost. But there they were, cheerful, friendly and chipping.

money paid them. Since Mr. Mellarg has taken hold of the Departments of Commerce and Labor the output of work has been increased, he says, fully 50 per cent. "Indeed, I would swear it has been increased 25 per cent," he exclaimed. "and it is simply the result of making the men just do their plain duty. No one is asked to work himself to death or make a phenomenal record. It is simply a case of doing what he is paid for; that is all there is to it."

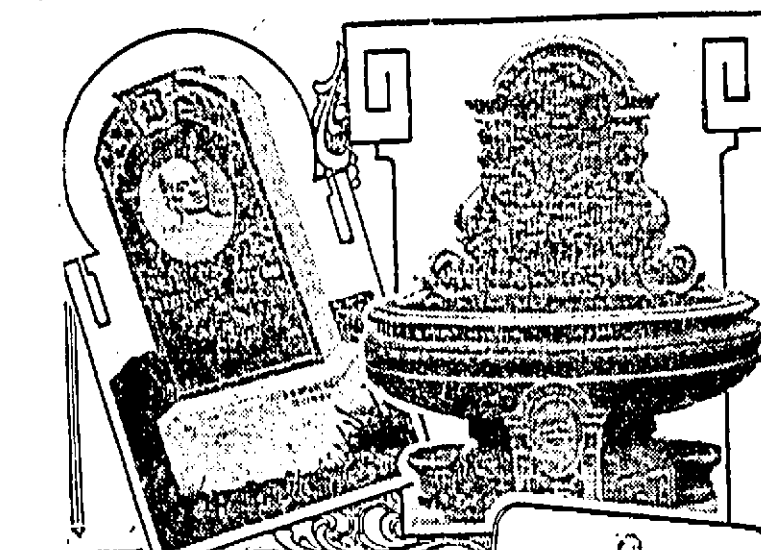

"I propose that the employees of this department shall render a fair equivalent for the salaries paid them, and those who do not must get out," continued the secretary. "It is purely a question of putting the department on a business basis. I am less disposed to exacting with a man who has grown gray in the service after years of faithful performance of duty than with the young fellows who have come into it to be supported. The fellows who observe office hours because they are compelled to, who drop their pens at the hour for quitting no matter what the condition of their work or who fail to give intelligent interest to it at any time have no place here."

"Men of bad habits whether it be intemperance in drink or intemperance in neglect of duty need expect no consideration from me. I am going to consider each case carefully on its merits and when I act it may be depended upon my action will be well within the requirements of the law. Asked as to the authenticity of a statement recently published in which a prominent officer of the department of commerce and labor is said to have assailed the civil service commission, charging it with the responsibility for the wholesale amount of inefficiency found to exist in his department and with the daily open and flagrant violation of the law, Secretary Nagel said: "So far as I am concerned, the statement is utterly without foundation and false."

"The trouble here is being dealt with here and will be dealt with in a proper manner. I know of nothing to warrant the charge that the civil service commission is hampering this department or responsible for the inefficient employees that may be found in it. The charges referred to intimated that the United States civil service commission is responsible for the wholesale amount of inefficiency found in the department of commerce and labor, and that the commission daily openly and flagrantly violates the civil service laws."

WORK OR GET OUT. Washington, D. C.—A sweeping investigation of the clerks in the department of commerce and labor is to begin results this week, Secretary Nagel and his able assistant, Grady Mellarg, have been working quietly, endeavoring to find out if the government is getting its full value out of its employees, and the result have proven conclusively that it is not. Under Secretary Nagel's instructions Mr. Mellarg has investigated the case of each individual clerk in the department and has reported those whom he classed as "mechanical" clerks to his superior. By the term "mechanical" he means "the man who drops his pen in the middle of a letter at quite that time, who takes no pains to inform himself as to the proper performance of his duties, whose chief recommendation is not what he is doing but what he has done in days gone by, or whose nerves need alcoholic stimulant to stimulate him for his daily task."

You probably have enough money in your pocket now to make the "cash payment" required to secure some advertised bargain in real estate. And if you are a good want advertiser, before the last payment becomes due you will have found a buyer for it, and pocketed a pretty profit. The victory that counts is the one snatched from the fire.

TO ALL USERS OF FLOUR

We are now selling more Flour than any other one store in the city. Why? Because we are selling the which is one of the very best and from 10c to 25c per sack less.

We intend to sell a larger portion. How? Commencing Monday, July 19, we will have a lady at our store to demonstrate to all just what the Flour is. That it is the equal, if not a little better than the Flour you are now using, we care not what the brand, She will be here all that week.

Every family using Flour is cordially invited to witness the demonstration and see for yourself. We claim to make just as white bread, just as sweet, and just as many loaves to the sack as any Flour in the city.

Quality of Falcon

The Columbus Laboratories of Chicago made the following test using the best patent flour made as a standard by which to test Falcon:

CHICAGO, Aug. 25, 1908.
SHANNON & MOTT COMPANY, Des Moines, Iowa.
Dear Sirs: We beg leave to report on Comparative Flour Test as follows:
	Standard Spring Patent.	Sample Number 6941
Gluten—Per Cent	10.5	10.2
Ash—Per Cent	1.5	1.3
Absorption—Per Cent	62	62
Color	100.0	100.0
Loaves Per Barrel	100.0	100.0
Size of Loaf	100.0	100.0
Quality of Loaf	100.0	100.0
Average Value	100.0	98.5
Permuting Period	100.0	101.5
Quality of Gluten	100.0	101.5

NOTE—In the above report the gluten and the ash are expressed as parts in each one hundred parts of the flour. The absorption is the amount of water necessary to add to one hundred parts of the flour to make a dough of standard stiffness. The remaining values are so expressed as to show the relations to the standard flour which for the purpose is given a value of 100 per cent. The loaves produced are made under carefully controlled and uniform conditions and baked in accurately gauged baking cylinders in an electric oven. The value expressed as quality of loaf is based upon the color, flavor and texture of the bread. The AVERAGE VALUE expressed in per cent is the mean value, of color, loaves per barrel, size of loaf and quality of loaf. It should not be taken alone in comparing the value of flours, but each of the factors of which it is made up should receive consideration.

GENERAL REMARKS: 6941 is sample marked Falcon. Aug. 25, 1908. Very respectfully submitted, THE COLUMBUS LABORATORIES. J. A. W.

$15 in Gold Given Away as Prizes to Users of Falcon Flour

All will have a fair chance to win the prize. Prizes will be awarded on decision of competent judges whose names will be announced later. Making Money On the Farm

III.—Corn Culture

By C. Y. GREGORY.
Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture"

PREPARATION to raise a large crop of corn should begin in the fall of the previous year. Plowing for the crop should be done in the fall before it is possible. Weeds will grow and be killed by frost. Insects that are hibernating in the ground will meet the same fate. Frost is one of the farmer's best friends in many ways. The effect of freezing on the exposed plowing is to crumble it more thoroughly than could be done by half a dozen diskings. If the land is clover sod, as it should be, the highest yield is to be expected. The freezing will break up the sod better than can be done in any other way. In some cases, however, where there is considerable late fall growth that is available for fall and winter pasture, it is better to let the plowing go until spring, even if it does make a little more work getting it in shape.

Gathering Seed Corn.

Even more important than fall plowing is the selection of seed corn early in the fall and storing it carefully for the winter. The plan of going through the field early and picking the seed in a sack is sometimes advocated, but on most farms this is too much of an undertaking. A better way is to go out and husk a load as soon as it is fairly well ripened and before any very hard frosts come. If this is picked from the best part of the field there ought to be at least three or four bushels of good seed ears in it. These can be sorted out and the remainder spread over the bottom of the crib or fed to the hogs.

Half a dozen such loads will usually furnish all the seed needed. It is a good plan to save about twice as much seed as will be required, so that selection can be more rigid in the spring. If there are no very severe frosts before husking begins in earnest some more seed corn can be saved by putting a box on the side of the wagon, in which the best ears may be thrown. A better quality of seed may be obtained in this way because of a wider range of selection. It is not safe to depend on it entirely, however, because a hard freeze when the corn is full of moisture may kill the germs and make it worthless for seed. The first thing to do with newly gathered seed is to hang it up where it can dry out quickly. An open shed is the best place for this, as the air can circulate readily, while the roof keeps off the frost. A good way to hang the corn is to tie a number of ears on a long blinding twine. After the corn is well dried out and before extremely cold weather comes it should be put in the storage room. The attic is a good place, provided there is some provision for ventilation. If the corn is dry some freezing will not hurt it, but cold and moisture together are very injurious.

Selecting and Testing.

Along in February the corn should be sorted, picking out only those ears of fair size, well filled at the butts and tips and symmetrically shaped throughout. Further instructions for selecting corn will be given in article 4. After the corn is sorted a few ears should be taken from a number of ears in different parts of the seed room and tested. A fold of moist muslin between two dinner plates makes a good tester. Put the corn between the layers of cloth and set it in some out of the way place in the living room. In three or four days it will be ready to examine. If all the kernels show strong sprouts try a second test. If this gives the same result the vitality of the seed may be taken for granted. If some of the kernels fail to germinate and others have weak sprouts the individual ear test should be used.

For this select a box of any convenient size and put into it three or four inches of moist sand or sawdust. On this place a strip of muslin which has been marked into inch squares. Lay down as many ears in a row on the floor as there are squares in the box. Take four to six kernels from each ear, selecting them from different parts, and place them in a square corresponding to the number of the ear from which they came. Cover the kernels with three or four layers of moist cloth and with some more of the sawdust or sand and set away as before. When the kernels germinate you have a complete record of the vitality of each ear. Those in which one or more of the kernels failed to germinate should be discarded. Those that show weak germination should be put in a pile by themselves. If there is enough seed without them they should not be used at all. If there is not enough of the strong seed the other will have to be used. By putting it on the warmest, driest soil it will make a fairly good growth.

Grading the Seed.

After the corn has been tested it should be run through a seed corn grader. This will remove the irregular butts and tips and divide the rest into several grades, according to size. If the corn is well graded in this way an edge drop planter will give the best results. For kernels of different sizes, however, the full hill drop is preferable. The calibration of the planter is an important point. If an even stand is to be secured, by blocking up the planter so that the wheels are clear of the ground and running through a pulpit or so of each grade of corn plates can be selected that will drop the desired number of kernels ninety-five times out of a hundred. These plates should be put with their particular grade of corn in readiness for planting time.

Preparing the Soil.

With graded seed of high germinating power and a planter properly calibrated a good stand is almost certain. The next step is to prepare the soil to receive the seed. In sections where there is any danger of drought it pays to run over the fall plowing with a harrow early in the spring. This crumbles the surface and checks evaporation. It also encourages the weeds to start, only to be killed by the disk later. As soon as possible after the small grain is in the disk should be set to work on the corn ground. If there is time it pays to double disk, as the soil is left in smoother and finer condition. After diskings the ground should be harrowed occasionally until planting time.

In many cases corn follows corn, and the plowing must be done in the spring. Spring plowing should not be very deep, as it makes a loose layer of dirt into which the moisture cannot readily rise from the subsoil. As a consequence the furrows will dry out, and the growth of the young corn plant is checked. A disk before plowing will cut up the stalks and provide a fine layer which will fall into the bottom of the furrow and help to restore capillarity. In soils that are liable to bake, each day's plowing should be harrowed before leaving the field at night. A little work at this time will prevent the formation of clods and save ten times as much trouble trying to pulverize them later. Three or four additional harrowings will usually put the spring plowing into first class shape for planting.

It is better to check than to drill when growing corn for grain, as it can be kept cleaner, with a resulting larger yield. For fodder or silage drilled corn gives more tons of dry matter per acre and is more easily handled by the corn blower. In some of the states west of the Missouri river, where the soil is light and rainfall scanty, listing gives the best results.

The number of kernels to use per hill depends upon the richness of the soil. On the average corn belt soils three kernels per hill will give the best results. Very rich soils can support four, while on poor soils two are enough. It pays both in looks and in ease of cultivating to drive straight while planting and to take pains to have the rows check straight crosswise.

Cultivation.
As many harrowings as possible should be given the corn between planting time and the time it comes up. If heavy rains have packed the soil or if it is badly infested with weeds it will pay to follow the planter marks with the cultivator before harrowing.

As soon as the rows can be followed the cultivator should be started. If any deep cultivation is to be given it should be the first two times over, before the soil is filled with corn roots. After the corn is six or eight inches high some form of surface cultivator that will not disturb the soil to a depth of more than two or three inches should be used. In the western part of the corn belt, where the fields are large, the two row cultivator is becoming popular. If the corn is very straight both ways these cultivators work well after the first time over and enable one man to handle at least half as much more land.

The problem of cultivating a cornfield several hundred acres in extent, such as is found in many of the great corn growing regions of the prairie states, has been greatly simplified since the two row cultivator came into use. With the perfect working corn planters now in the market the rows of corn may be made so straight that the two row cultivator can be used without difficulty. This has brought about a facility of cultivation which has added largely to the yield in many parts of the country. Before the coming of the double row cultivator there was danger that much of the land of the western portion of the belt would become too weedy for corn culture.

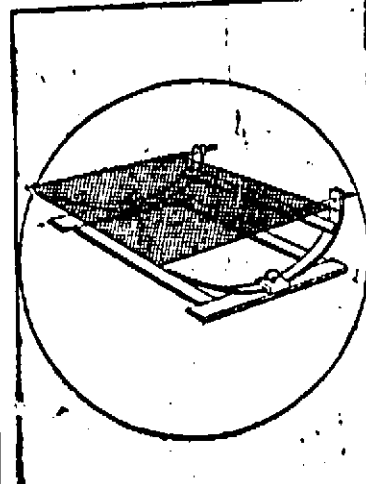

And Don't Worry.

Keep square with the world and all will go well. Take exercise for the body's sake and dress well and up to the times for self-respect.—Exchange.

PILLOW MADE OF WIRE

Spring, Covered With Bedclothes, Yields to Pressure of Head.

At first thought the idea of a wire pillow does not give a pronounced impression of comfort. On mature consideration, however, it will be seen that this pillow, the invention of an Illinois man, is both comfortable and sanitary. It is made of a wire frame, the salient feature of which is two substantially parallel sides which are curved on the arc of a circle. These sides are fastened ends up and on top of them rests a fine wire screen, fastened at the corners so that the body of the screen yields to any pressure or weight placed on it. When at the end of the bed, the wire frame can be raised or lowered as to vary the tension of the cover. The whole is covered with a sheet or thin pad and the screen yields to the head as readily as a down pillow. The principal advantage of this pillow is its sanitary merits, as it affords no home for germs, and for that reason is of particular value for use in institutions.

WINDOW REFRIGERATOR

Wire Box Keeps Food Fresh and Safe in Open Air.

Dwellers in apartment and lodging houses, will find the window refrigerator designed by a New York man, one of the most useful articles they can have. It is made of wire and other articles of metal and is placed in the window. It is a place where they will remain fresh much longer than in a box. The refrigerator consists of an oblong box as long as the width of a window, with supports at each end and made running up to the side of the window to further strengthen its position. The box is made of wire mesh with a solid lid, thus permitting a free current of air through it, yet protecting the contents from flying dirt and insects. Where space is at a premium the advantage of this device are readily apparent. Aside from this the window box will be found to be a great saver of ice, as the necessity for that commodity will be materially reduced.

ST. LOUIS BUILDINGS FLOODED.
Mississippi Still Rising and Crops Suffer Great Damage.

St. Louis, July 14.—The Mississippi river continued rising yesterday, and at 8:15 o'clock the gauge stood at 23.4, a rise of 2 feet in one hour. The flood stage is 30 feet. Water has now entered many buildings on the levee, but ample warning prevented the destruction of property.

The greatest damage has been to farm crops along the Missouri river between Jefferson City and St. Charles. Thousands of acres of rich farm lands have been flooded and the crops destroyed. Wheat ready for threshing has been destroyed before it could be moved and corn fields wiped out.

Kansas City, Mo., July 14.—That the floods in western Missouri and eastern Kansas have passed their worst stage was the assurance given by reports from all the affected points last night. Both the Kansas and Missouri rivers began falling at Kansas City and this is taken to indicate that the backwaters will rapidly recede. Railway schedules were almost back to normal conditions.

Judge Gives Jurors Thin Coats.
Boston, July 14.—Alpaca coats for jurymen were introduced in the superior criminal court by order of Judge R. O. Harria. The court stated that he desired the jurymen to be comfortable during the hot weather and had ordered the coats, the cost to be borne by the county treasury.

Clans Riot in Belfast.

Belfast, Ireland, July 14.—The Nationalist quarter of the city has been the scene of serious riots, owing to the disturbed state of the district since the conflicts between the Nationalists and Orangemen on July 12.

Telephone Monopoly Wins Again.

New York, July 14.—By a decision of the appellate division of the supreme court another attempt to break the telephone monopoly in New York went down in defeat, leaving the field to the New York Telephone Company. The court denied the appeal of the New York Independent Telephone Company for permission to place telephone wires under the streets of the city.

The Man From Brodney's

"I've noticed that," said the enemy coolly. "He's usually with Lady Deppingham. It's lucky that Japan is free from gamblers, gentlemen."

"Oh, yes," said Saunders, "none of that talk, you know."

"There's another thing I want to speak of," said the enemy, arising to prepare the second round of Juleps. "I hear that your clients and their partners for life are in the habit of gambling like fury up there."

"Gambling?" said Britt. "What rot!"

"The servants say that they play bridge every night for vast piles of

The enemy piloted them sturdily through the rubble and the "the wife" daily for sapphires uncountable. Oh, I got it straight."

"Why, man, it's all a joke. They use gun wads and simply play that they are rubes."

"My word," said Saunders, "there isn't a ruby or sapphire in the party."

"That's all right," said the enemy, standing before them with a bunch of mint in one hand and the bowl of ice in the other. "Every man in Japan thinks that your people are gambling with jewels that belong to the corporation. They think there's something crooked, d'ye see? My advice to you is, stop that sort of joking."

"By Jove," said Saunders, taking a straw and at the same time staring in open mouthed wonder at the tall host, "you appall me! It's most extraordinary."

"This is all offered in a kindly spirit, you understand," said the mysterious enemy. "We might as well live comfortably as to die unseasonably here. Another little suggestion, Mr. Saunders. Please tell Lord Deppingham that if he is in search of rubies he'll get an unmanageable bullet in the back of his head some day soon. He has no right to a single ruby, even if he should see one and know what it was. Just tell him that, please, Mr. Saunders."

"I shall confound him," exploded Saunders, smiling the while. "He's too uppish anyhow. He needs taking down."

"Ah, hell!" interrupted the enemy as the native boy entered, "no mail, eh?"

"No, excellency, the ship is not due to arrive for two weeks."

"Ah, but, Sellm, you forget that I am expecting a letter from Von Biltz's wives. They promised to let me know how soon he is able to resume work at the mines."

"I hear you polished him off neatly," said Britt, with a grin.

"Just the rough edges, Mr. Britt. He is now a gem of purest ray serene. By the way, I hope you'll not take my mild suggestions amiss."

"There's nothing I object to except your power to call strikes among our servants. That seems to me to be rather high handed," said Britt good naturedly.

"No doubt you're right," agreed the other, "but you must remember that I needed the cigarettes."

"My word!" muttered Saunders admiringly.

"Look here, old man," said Britt, his cheeks glowing. "It's mighty good of you to take this trouble for—"

"Don't mention it. I'd only ask in return that we three be a little more sociable hereafter. We're not here to cut each other's throat, you know, and we've got a deadly half year ahead of us. What say?"

For answer the two lawyers arose and shook hands with the excellent enemy. When they started for the chateau at 7 o'clock, each with six mint Juleps about his person, they were too mellow for analysis. The enemy, who had drunk but little, took an arm of each and piloted them sturdily through the town.

CHAPTER X.
THE SLOUGH OF TRANQUILLITY.

THREE months stole by with tantalizing slowness. The autumn passed on into winter without a change of nature. Christmas day was as hot as if it had come in mid-summer; the natives were as naked, the trees as fully clad. The six months were passing away in spite of themselves. Ten weeks were left before the worn but determined hosts could cast off their bonds and rush away to other climes. It mattered little whether they went away rich or poor. They were to go! That was the richest thing the future held out to them.

True, they rode and played and swam and romped without restraint, but beneath all of their abandon there lurked the ever present pathos of the jail, the asylum, the detention ward.

Not until the end of January was there a sign of revolt against the ever growing, insidious condition of melancholy. As they turned into the last third of their exile they found heart to rejoice in the thought that release was coming nearer and nearer. The end of March—eight weeks off! Soon there would be but seven weeks, then six!

And all this time the Islanders toiled as they had toiled for years. They reckoned in years, while the strangers cast up their account in weeks and called them years. Each day the brown men worked in the mines piling gold into the vaults with a resolution that never faltered.

From London came disquieting news for all sides to the controversy. "The struggle promised to be drawn out for years, perhaps. The lonely legation, marooned in the far south sea, began to realize that even after they had spent their six months of probation they would still have months, even years, of waiting before they could touch the fortune they had chanced to. The Islanders also were vaguely awake to the fact that everything might be tied up for years. A restless, stubborn feeling of alarm spread among them. This feeling gradually developed itself into bitter resentment. Hatred for the people who were causing this delay was growing deeper and deeper.

Their counselor, the complacent enemy, held himself aloof from the men and women that his charges were fighting. He met the two lawyers often, but nothing passed between them that could have been regarded as the slightest breach of trust. He lived like a rajah in his shady bungalow, surrounded by the luxuries of one to whom all things are brought indivisible. If he had any longing for the society of women of his own race and kind, he carefully concealed it. His indifference to the subtle though unmistakable appeals of the two gentlewomen to the chateau was telling in the extreme. "What he does," they thought, "he does deliberately, though politely, declined their invitation to tea one afternoon their humiliation knew no bounds.

Lady Deppingham and Mrs. Browne should not be misunderstood by the reader. They loved their husbands—I am quite sure of that—but they were tired of seeing no one else, tired of talking to no one else. Moreover, in support of this one-sided assertion, they experienced from time to time the most melancholy attacks of jealousy. If Mrs. Browne in plain despair went off for a day's ride with Lord Deppingham, that gentleman's wife was sick with jealousy. If Lady Agnes strolled in the moonlit gardens with Mr. Browne, the former Miss Bates of Boston could scarcely control

SNELL LETTER TO WOMAN SHOWS HIM AS A WOOLER

Tells Bloomington Correspondent of Love—"Florence" Makes Another "Touch" for Gems and Cash.

Clinton, Ill., July 14.—Col. Tom Snell, in the role of a wooer, and not as the person wooed, is shown in a letter he wrote to a Bloomington woman which was returned to him. That the colonel was a "jollier" is made plain by the mislaid, which reads:

"My very dearest friend:—Both your kind letters received. I wish I knew just how to answer them. I must acknowledge inability to do them justice. I am better on the talk than write. I do not feel like either at this time. I am feeling very badly all the time and particularly after thinking over and over again of your life. Oh, I wish I could make you forget the past and think only of the brighter days you have before you which I hope may be full of happiness and prosperity. I wish I could say something that would cheer you up."

"I feel as though you had more trouble than any one could stand on this earth. I wish I could be with you this evening. I enjoy myself in your company much better than with anyone else on earth, but I do not want to make it unpleasant for you. Now, dearest, I want to see you. I think of you all the time and do sympathize with you in your trouble and would share them with you if I could. Darling, do you want to have me come? All that you have written me will be between us and no other. Your true and devoted friend, T. Snell."

In a letter to Snell "Florence" said: "My diamond earrings you ordered came today. They cost two pairs, the pair at $275. My husband says, are the greatest, handsomest he ever saw. They are magnificent, so I kept them and return the $235 pair. Darling, you will have to send me at once $75. The $20 I am keeping for my little expenses when I go to Chicago next week."

Rev. Thomas Canady, was among the witnesses who told of Snell's flighty actions at the trial yesterday. Judge Solon Pillsbury of Chicago, who is presiding in the case, addressed a letter signed "Black Hand," received to "Clearcut Judges," threatening them with death unless court business is expedited.

"She's coming!" she cried ecstatically, repeating herself a dozen times. "Who's coming, Aggy?" roared her husband for the sixth time.

"The princess! Deppy, I'm going to squeeze you! I must squeeze some body! Isn't it glorious? Now—now—now life will be worth living in this beastly place."

Her dearest friend, the princess, had written to say that she was coming to spend a month with her.

"In her uncle's yacht, Deppy—the big one that came to Coves last year, don't you know? Of course you do, don't you? Who's coming, Aggy?" roared her husband for the sixth time.

TAFT SNUBBED BY "UNCLE JOE"

SPEAKER REFUSES TO MAKE PRESIDENT'S CHOICE A TAFT CONFERENCE.

NEAR THE BREAKING POINT

Chances for Revision Downward Not Bright Unless President Digs Up the "Big Stick"—Forced to Change Corporation Tax Plan.

Washington, July 14.—Important developments in the tariff fight are expected before the day is over. Leaders admit the situation is grave and the breaking point is near at hand.

When the break comes it will find either President Taft or the undecided promising tariff men in undisputed control. It will make plain to the country whether the Republican platform pledge of downward revision is to be redeemed. This quite apart from the corporation tax feature—which is considerably turned over to the administration for adjustment.

The strain upon the situation was increased when it became known that "Uncle Joe" Cannon, who in the house is co-operating with Aldrich in the senate to defeat downward revision, has been guilty of a direct personal snub to the president. Representative Eisenhower J. Hill of Connecticut was omitted, by seniority, to a place on the conference committee; but he is a downward revision man, and he was not appointed.

Taft Asks Appointment.

It now develops that President Taft, some days before the conference was named, asked Speaker Cannon in a letter to name Mr. Hill. Instead, the speaker put on Fordney and Calderhead, who are both ardent high tariff advocates.

He advanced as a defense a desire to have a more just division geographically than would have been possible with an added New England man, but he failed to convince the men opposed to the Aldrich-Cannon combination.

That Mr. Taft should not resent the snub keenly is impossible; and it is held in certain quarters that it will go far toward persuading him to get down the "big stick" and brush the dust off preparatory to getting into action.

Situation is Not Bright.

An summed up by a leading eastern Republican senator, who is closely in touch with developments both at the White House and in the conference committee, the tariff situation as it stands is far from bright for revision downward.

President Taft has not yet disclosed his hand. He is still smiling and talking conciliation; but he may be playing a different game under the surface. Without question, if he will declare positively to congress just what he wants in the way of a tariff bill he can have it—and no power on the part of the Aldrich-Cannon forces in that case can prevent it.

The administration-nurtured corporation tax amendment was subjected to close scrutiny at a cabinet session. It was introduced by Attorney General Wickersham and the members of the President Taft cabinet recognized it. In spite of the disfigurement it had received during its brief visit to the senate. The attorney general had provided for the abused prodigal now returned similar to that which it wore on its first journey beyond the White House.

Tax Cut to One Per Cent.

The two per cent. tax on net earnings had been reduced to one per cent., and other changes were made which convinced the president that it would be safe to let the youngster venture once more to Capitol Hill and test its welcome.

By passing over the cotton and woolen schedules without taking up any of the disputed paragraphs, and skipping the amended points connected with the rates on lumber in the wool schedule, the tariff conference were able to dispose of about 400 amendments.

Her dearest friend, the princess, had written to say that she was coming to spend a month with her.

"In her uncle's yacht, Deppy—the big one that came to Coves last year, don't you know? Of course you do, don't you? Who's coming, Aggy?" roared her husband for the sixth time.

"The princess! Deppy, I'm going to squeeze you! I must squeeze some body! Isn't it glorious? Now—now—now life will be worth living in this beastly place."

Her dearest friend, the princess, had written to say that she was coming to spend a month with her.

LOOKS LIKE IT.

"In Congress wrangling yet over the tariff?" asked the man with the big nose of the passenger in the street car who had been reading his paper.

"Oh, yes," was the weary reply. "Anything said about the Lumber Trust?"

"I didn't notice."

"It has been denied in Congress that there was one, but if they had sent to me I could have told 'em straight from the shoulder. I've been wondering if they would send for me."

"So there is such a trust, and you've had experience with it?"

"Yes, sir, I've been right there. In March I had plans made by an architect for a house, and about the first of April I started out among the lumber dealers to see what I could do. I visited twelve before I got tired, and do you know each and every one of them gave me the same answer? Why, it was just as if one man had spoken for the rest. Don't that look like unity?"

"Why, each gave you the same answer, eh?"

"Why, no, not exactly the same answer. We didn't get to figures."

"Oh, just talk."

"Yes, and mighty little of that. I asked them to trust me for six months for the lumber, and every one of them told me to go to and fast as I reached them."

"Well? Why, it's the biggest trust on the face of the earth, and if Congress wants any of my help to bust it let 'em just give me the nod."

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

THE grace of beautiful lines is not possible for every woman. But the grace of beautiful movements is.

The average woman moves far too rapidly to be graceful.

When she is young, all the hurriedness and crowdedness and nervousness of her life is in her gait and gesture.

There is no grace in such awkwardness, of course. Lack of vitality is always awkward. I know of nothing more thoroughly ungraceful than the lackadaisical slowness of a sickly girl.

When she grows old, she moves more slowly to be sure, but it is the slowness of feebleness rather than of poise.

Health and vigor plus poise, abundant vitality plus control, are the recipes for real grace.

Practice walking slowly. Practice moving slowly. The girl who knows how to cross her first ball room with deliberate ease is no less hurried by the consciousness of being the "eyecore of neighboring eyes" than a great advantage over the girl who rushes with nervous haste to her seat.

The head of a dramatic school said that one of the hardest things he had to teach his pupils was to walk slowly enough to appear graceful upon the stage.

Rapid motion is like much ornamentation on a gown. It covers defects. Slow motion reveals defects and hence helps to eliminate them.

The psychological effect of controlled motion is greater than most people realize, realize.

In one of the western states a unique prison system was installed some years ago. By this system the criminals who were guilty of some crime caused by sudden passion—murder or assault or some similar act—instead of being subjected to the torture of solitary confinement or the dull round of ordinary prison labor, are set at work at some task which requires most careful and controlled movements.

They are often given, for instance, the most minute and precise part of watch-making to do.

The slightest hasty movement means the destruction of the work of days or weeks.

Under these conditions their whole natures change.

Self-control becomes a habit. Ill-considered impulse and passion are entirely conquered, and some men are sent back into the world all through the application of this principle.

Grace of motion is a beautiful thing to acquire. And if through becoming captain of your body, you become also "captain of your soul," isn't it doubly worth while?

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 14, 1899.—Pleide.—The Germans are to have a picnic in Bennett's Grove, on Monday afternoon and evening.

Sultry.—The weather has been decidedly oppressive today, the thermometer indicating 88 at noon and 81 at three o'clock.

Adjourned Meeting of the Board of Review.—The Board of Review will meet at the office of the City Clerk, on Friday morning at nine o'clock. Those who wish to examine the assessment rolls can do so at the time specified.

Baseball.—On Monday the 12th Inst. the Little Giant, B. C., of Milton played a match game with a nine selected from the married men of the town, and beat them by a score of 18 to 13. The playing was very good on both sides but the old men will have to practice considerably before they can make a match for their younger opponents.

Accepted the Call.—Rev. Lyman Whiting has accepted the call extended to him by the Congregational Church of this city, and will enter upon his new pastoral relationship on the first of September. The Congregational Society are now engaged in erecting a parsonage for their new minister on the lot nearly opposite the church on Dodge street.

Accidents Tuesday.—A little son of John Burns in the Fourth ward had his thigh fractured by a stone thrown for a larger boy whose name we did not learn.

John McCarty had his leg fractured below the knee, the broken bone protruding through the flesh, making an ugly wound. MORAL: Don't scuffle after you get to be men.

Found.—Upon the street a pocket-book of such proportion as to easily accommodate $10,000 in green backs. The finder's charge, however, may be easily imagined upon opening it to ascertain its sole contents to be only a lot of blank paper torn up in the form of bills. It is presumed to belong to some student, principally from the fact that it had no money in it. Should this prediction be correct the owner can have it by paying half the usual advertising rates for this notice.

SKIRT ALWAYS EVEN

Marker insures its Being Made the Same Length All Way Around.

Women who make their own clothes owe a debt of gratitude to the Danish woman who invented the skirt marker as shown in the illustration. One of the most difficult things about dressmaking is to make the skirt hang even all the way around. With this device the length of a skirt may be made mechanically accurate by the yardstick, and that in a very short time. The marker is clamped to the edge of a table, canvas side out. The woman steps up to it and with a piece of chalk, or if the goods be perishable, with pins, marks a line around the hips, turning so that the whole skirt is marked. She then measures the distance from the slot to the floor, subtracts the number of inches she wishes her skirt to clear the floor, and then measures that distance all around the skirt from the chalk line near the waist. It is easy to see that the most skillful professional dressmaker could not gauge a skirt length better than this, if at all.
